PAUL'S
Patent Columb an Oil.

In respect to which the Proprietor observes:—

"THE great sales of the Columbian Oil, since it has been brought before the public, prove its intrinsic value, and is a pleasing foreboding of what we have to expect from its more extensive circulation.

Many interesting certificates might be furnished, testifying to the great value of the Columbian Oil, but we have preferred giving but few, wishing to rest more on the merits of the medicine, than on the effects produced by certificates from a source however respectable.

The following are among the complaints in which the Columbian Oil has been found very efficacious, viz. rheumatism, consumption, gout, pains in any part of the body, but more particularly of the back and breast; asthma, phthisic, influenza, colds, coughs, whooping coughs, diseases of the eye and eye lids, toothache, ear ache, and deafness, cholic, cramps, external and internal bruises, sprains and flesh wounds, old sores, ulcers, felons, scalds, burns, mumps, dysentery or flux, croop, quinzy, diarhœa or lax, summer complaint of children, indigestion, loss of appetite, nervous debility, piles, mercurial diseases, especially in those cases where the system has been charged with mercury for some considerable time, and in those excruciating pains subsequent to its too great use and exposure. Herpes, or diseases of the skin, such as ring worms, tetters, scald head, &c. stiffness of joints and limbs, palsy ague and fever, cholera morbus, gravel, gleets, obstructed urine, scurvy, and in almost all cases of a general or local nature.

We are aware that in recommending a medicine in so many diseases, the public, especially those who have not used the Oil, may be induced to question its virtues, but a disposition of this nature will soon be dissipated, when they are informed that a great proportion of the diseases are owing to the same general cause.—And in those cases where the diseases differ materially in their nature, the effects produced are nearly the same, although not on the same principle.

Charles County, Maryland.

FOR sale, by private contract, the valuable tract of land called Benfield, situated near the mouth of Port Tobacco Creek. This tract of land yields to none in this county for fertility of soil, healthfulness of situation & convenience to markets. The land being in the whole about 1000 acres, is now conveniently divided into a few farms, let to good tenants for more than 1000 dollars per annum, for the present year only; it may be divided to suit purchasers. There is besides, houses for tenants, etc. etc.—a good two story frame house, with four large rooms on a floor, and four brick chimnies: the water is excellent, and the seite of the dwelling house elegant: the barn, corn house and granary are newly built. More than 100 acres of this land is fit for timothy, with which grass a few acres are at this time set.—The farmer and the man of wealth may here find health and amusement, combined with great profit, land in Charles county being at least 50 per cent below their average value. There is no county in the state of Maryland where lands offer to the cultivator equal advantages

Also, two other tracts of land called the Grange and the Mill Farm, near the town of Port Tobacco, in a healthy and genteel neighborhood, containing together about 1000 acres of excellent farming land, a large portion of which is proper for timothy meadow, of which grass there is at this time 12 or 14 acres, and as much more ready to lay down. On the Grange Farm there is a large and elegant mansion with all necessary offices, an extesive commodious garden, filled with the choicest flowers, and fruits of the best qualities in great abundance, excellent water, and proverbial for its health. In a residence of 22 years, no members of the family of the present proprietors has ever been attacked by an intermittent or fall fever of any kind.—Should it be desired by the purchaser, about 800 acres more might be added to these farms, in which case the quantity of acres advertised would amount to about 3600 Terms of sale made known on appication to the subscriber.

R. NEWMAN.

If the above lands are not sold previous to the 19th March next, they will on that day be offered at public auction, without reserve.

[Translation]

Mr. Onis to the Secretary of State
10th February, 1817

SIR—I have received the official letter which you did me the honor to address to me, under the date of the 25th of last month, stating that, not withstanding the desire the President had to adjust all differences between Spain and the United States on just conditions, and to their mutual convenience it was seen, with great regret, that a like disposition was not manifested on the part of Spain,

You support this opinion on the ground that I adhere to the same sentiments which my government manifested in former times; and also, that the President, seeing the powers with which his majesty had been pleased to honor me, could not comprehend why I should think it necessary to recur to my sovereign to obtain new instructions. You will permit me to observe, that the number of privateers armed in the ports of this country, to cruise under an unknown flag against Spainish commerce, have obstructed in such a manner the communications between the Perninsula and these States, that the accidental circumstance of Mr Brent's having taken charge of the duplicates to his majesty's powers has alone obtained for me the receipt of them, and that I am even yet without the originals; with which, doubtless, his majesty sent me instructions, and communicated to me his reasons for transferring the negotiation here. I can a sure you I am entirely ignorant of what has passed in Madrid between Mr. Erving and Mr. Cevallos and that I am not less so of the motives which have induced his majesty to transfer the discussion here, notwithstanding I had informed him, that I had myself proposed to you that authority and instructions should be given to Mr. Erving in relation to it, it being clear to me, that his majesty desired nothing with more anxiety than to see an affair terminated, which must be the precursor of reciprocal intimacy, which should be established between the two governments, for the mutual benefit of their respective subjects and citizens

If I might be permitted to conjecture the motives which have induced his majesty to transfer the negotiation here, I believe I should not mistake in designating, as the principal one of them, the knowledge his majesty has of your talents of your justice, [justification] and of the conciliatory disposition which you manifested in your conferences with Mr Cevallos, to concur in the settlement of these discussions; and, as the second, this; that, in the moment of the arrival of the queen, his august spouse, and of the festivities incident to this happy event, his majesty could not give the attention which requisite to these affairs, which he considered of the first importance. You are too just not to appreciate these motives, and not to see in them any thing but a new proof of the anxiety of his majesty to avoid all delay or inactivity The President, informed by you of the motives, will, I flatter myself, form the same opinion, and see the necessity of my writing for the necessary instructions from my sovereign, before I subscribe to the points which ought to form the basis of this treaty. The short delay which may result from this, will be amply compensated for and with mutual advantage, if you would place me in a situation to inform my government of the principal points on which the government of the United States wish to see this negotiation turn You know that as yet you have only made known to me in our first conference, that if we were to go into a discussion of the rights of the two powers as was done by you and Mr. Cevallos, much time would be lost, and each of us would retain his opinion. You know that I agreed to this; but as the same time intimated, that I saw no other more certain mode of accomplishing the object which the two powers had in view, since it must be with a knowledge of the respective rights of each party that we ought to begin in fixing the indemnities and compensations, which belonged to each, on the principles of equity, justice and convenience; and that the only way of avoiding this, and of shortning the negotiation, would be that the two powers, giving up all idea of rivals ip or aggrandisement, should agree between themselves, in good faith, to fix their limits according to equity, justice, and mutual convenience, so that they should not be liable to be violated by the subjects of the one or the other, and in way to avoid the renewal of the complaints which had given rise to misunderstanding. You approved an idea so liberal, so generous and so demonstrative of the disposition of the king, my master, to accommodate the United States in whatever might be agreeable with his interests; and, in consequence, you made known to me, that the United States wished to unite to their dominions the two Floridas. As, in the former negotiations, the cession of West Florida, to the Rio Perdido, was alone spoken of, and as his majesty was ignorant of the new desires of this government, I said to you that although I did not positively know whether his majesty would deprive himself of East Florida, and of the important port of Pensacola, which was the key of the Gulf of Mexico, yet the desire of his majesty to gratify this government was great, and that it was very probable he might agree to do it provided that on the part of the U. S. there should be offered to him a just equivalent, and one of reciprocal convenience

I leave to your impartiality and justice, and to that of the whole world to say, if, on the part of his majesty, a more positive proof is wanting of the interest which he takes in arranging these affairs in a friendly manner, and, if I should not find myself more authorised to doubt of equal dispositions on the part of the U. S, in consequence of the proposition which you made me of only of not giving any thing in exchange for the two provinces, the cession of which the United States desire but requiring that his majesty should cede to them a part of another, which has been in the uninterrupted possession of his majesty for more than two hundred years.

I am, nevertheless, very far from judging it thus A firm and permanent arrangement of all points of difference, is equally useful and necessary to both nations. It ought to be the basis of the happiness of their respective subjects and citizens; and, to obtain this it ought necessarily to be founded in justice, equity and mutual convenience His majesty is disposed to conclude it on these terms and he has too much confidence in the well known rectitude of this administration to think that it could solicit it on other terms.

You are pleased also to inform me in your esteemed note, that to the propositions which I have suggested as worthy of the consideration of my government, that of the United States cannot agree and that abandoning the arrangement of limits you desire only to know if I am disposed to sign a convention for settling the injury sustained by the American commerce, and by the suppression of the deposite at New-Orleans.

As the propositions which I have made to you were confined solely to the leaving to your election whether we should treat, by discussing and fixing in a friendly manner the respective rights of each power, to the end that having agreed to them, and the obligations of each, upon the other being known the compensation to which each may be entitled might be settled: or that, leaving things to remain in the state they were, we might agree in a friendly manner as to what would suit each—I cannot conceive that the United States should be of opinion that they cannot agree to any of these points.

I would offend my own delicacy if, after being assured by you that the United States were disposed to terminate all the differences which exist between the two nations by a treaty, founded on justice, equity, and mutual convenience. I could believe that the United States would open the only means which, in my opinion exist to arrive at this end I judge, then that I have not explained myself with sufficient clearness, or that I have not well comprehended you; & I again renew my propositions in a plain, clear and demonstrative manner, giving you an example which you cannot but find just

Let us suppose (and a very proper supposition) that you and I are intimate friends; you have purchased an estate adjoining one of mine; (I do not now inquire whether you purchased it from a person who had a right to sell it or not—but you purchased it;) and, be it because some officious person said so, or because you thought so, you were of opinion that there was included in this purchase a part of my estate which I worked, took care of and possessed. As soon as you had made the purchase, and observed that possession was not given you of the land, I worked, and which you believed to belong to you, you asked me to give it up to you. I observed to you that it was true, that the land which you had purchased had also belonged to me formerly, that I had ceded it to him who had sold it such as he had delivered it, and in no greater extent; and that, consequently, he could not transfer to you more than I had given him. You and I refer to the seller, and he tells us that he never sold the land to you which you require, and never obtained it from me, nor had an intention of acquiring it.—Notwithstanding this declaration, which is decisive & irrevocable, I, from motives of friendship for you, and to do away all doubts on the point, propose to you that we should discuss you in a friendly manner, and assure you, that if you present to me unquestionable documents to prove that it belongs to you, I am ready to give it up. I ask you, dispassionately, if this proposition could be considered as inadmissable—I go further. I, who am anxious to accommodate you because you are my friend and a good neighbor, knowing that you desire to get part of my territory to round yours, and to facilitate the exportation of your produce, as their is a navigable river passing through it, carry my friendship and condescension so far as to say to you, that we will agree between ourselves, by a friendly investigation, what belongs to each; and, this being settled, I am ready to cede to you the lands you desire, for in equity, justice, and reciprocal convenience, fixing the limits between us in such a way that our servants should not engage us in quarrels and contests, as, it being our desire to live in the greatest harmony, we were equally interested in avoiding every subject of difference Will you say to me that these friendly propositions are inadmissible?—I believe not. Such, then neither more nor less are those which I have suggested to you in my former official note, and renew to you by this, hoping that, taking them into serious consideration, that you will view them as just, equitable, and even generous.

You cannot but know that the convention you propose, limited to the indemnification for injuries done to the American commerce, by the cruizers and tribunals of Spain, and by the suppression of the deposit at New-Orleans, will not accomplish fully the object which the two nations propose to themselves, of extinguishing all disagreements. Nevertheless, to give another proof of the deference of his majesty to the wishes of the republic, I agree to enter into negotiation with you on these two points, and to conclude a convention as to them, in which shall be embraced the just reclamations which his majesty shall produce gainst this government, and the various arrangements he desires to place in it for the encouragement of the commerce between the two nations, and to avoid injuries such as those, which, from the want of explicitness in the last treaty, have been experienced by the respective subjects of both. I will add more, and it is that the first points to which you refer, being founded in the treaty which exists between the two nations, I will subscribe to it without difficulty; and as to the second, it is of so small an amount, that I do not succeed in demonstrating to you that these injuries have not existed, or that they are much exaggerated, and that the United States have already admitted that they were satisfied for them, I will have no difficulty even as to them. I ought likewise to observe to you, that it will be easy to include in this same convention or treaty, a provisional arrangement of limits, without detaining us to fix them with exactitude. If the United States do not desire to make an essential change in the established limits, fixed by the treaties of 1763, 1764, 1783, 1795, and 1800, and that this arrangement should only apply to the uncultivated lands to the north of the Missouri, the boundaries of which were never settled between France and Spain, this question might be left for commissioners, named by each party, and their decision might be considered as part of the convention: But, in any case, the most efficient method of concluding these affairs will be, that you should have the goodness to say to me, with frankness what are the real views of the United States, what are the real and true compensation they are disposed to offer for the country they desire to obtain from his majesty, You may be assured that I will support, earnestly, proposals that are just and reciprocal convenient, and that on the return of the courier, I shall be able to sign, under the powers I have, a treaty mutually satisfactory to both parties, we, in the mean time, agreeing upon all the articles or minor considerations. You cannot but know that the instructions ought to be adapted to the greater or lesser territory of his majesty which the United States may desire to add to their dominions: and that, if they desire none, little difficulty can occur on the subject of the indemnities between the powers animated by conciliatory and just sentiments.

I renew to you my warmest respects, &c.

ALEXANDRIA.

MONDAY, MARCH 3.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT AT WASHINGTON.

February 28.

It has been hitherto generally taken for granted that the large square of ground in front of the east of the capitol, would be fenced in, as it were apart, from the noble edifice to which it belongs, and that idea was countenanced by the terms of the act of last session for improving it. To the great satisfaction, however, of every man of taste, who contemplates with pride that structure as a monument of American munificence. The original plan has been so far abandoned as to relieve the public from apprehensions on that score. The interior will next to the capitol is to be omitted, and the enclosure will be extended round the semicircular area that lies west of the building, so that the capitol will be surrounded with one noble piece of ground with no other fence between them than will serve to exclude cattle and carriages, perhaps a chain and posts. A resolution to that general effect, and to appropriate a sum of money to complete the whole, has been moved by Mr. Condit, the chairman of the committee, and ordered to lie on the table for consideration on Wednesday, and yesterday a bill to the effect was read twice and committed.

You may remember that in the course of the last session of congress a huge list of defaulters and an account of enormous balances due by them to government was laid before Congress. It created a momentary outcry and, as suited the humor or the spleen of individuals, much expression of indignation. That subsided, however, and as (according to the old saying) every body's business is nobody's business, the public became calm and silent on the subject, while government who were supposed to supine in the affair, were meditating the means of remedying the past abuses so far as they were remediable, and of preventing any of the same kind from taking place in future. A bill for the purpose was discussed on Tuesday and Wednesday in the House of Representatives: but how far it will be productive of its intended effects, lopped as it has been of a material part of it, is yet to be determined. This bill, which is entitled a bill "to provide for the prompt settlement of public accounts," goes to abolish the office of accountants and additional accountants of the departments of war and navy, and that of superintendant general of military supplies, and to create four additional auditors and one comptroller to the treasury department, and a solicitor of the treasury. From the nature of the circumstances those must be offices not only of weighty, arduous and important duty, but of high responsibility, fit to be confided only to men of strict purity of morals and independence of character, and therefore worthy of ample compensation. Accordingly 350 dollars was proposed as the annual salary for the comptroller, 3 000 dollars each for the auditors and the solicitor of the treasury: But the late epidemic of penuriousness caught from the miasmas of the compensation law and the nephitic effluvia of the public demagogues, has left behind it a morbid taint, a lassitude and an imbecility which have utterly disqualified all who were infected by that lowering distemper, from doing any thing virgorous, bold or munificent, for the present session, and which in all probability, will not be eradicated from the system for two or three sessions to come; so that the comptroller's compensation was sweated down to 3000 dollars, and that of the auditors, to 2000 each Thus have officers of very high trust been placed upon salaries not more than enough in this most expensive of places, and these most expensive of times, for a good responsible clerk.

As to the office of solicitor to the treasury, it is expunged from the bill. In order to enable government to secure the public treasury from the frauds and dexterous cozenage of the officers, to whom it becomes indispensably necessary to entrust large sums of money, the solicitor was vested by the bill with a summary power to issue process of distress against them ex sue officio, independent of the judiciary: and this being considered as unconstitutional, as a violation of the rights of the courts and of the people, and as a subversion particularly of that right which every man ought to have, viz. to a trial by jury. The power was struck out of the bill, and the office with little opposition followed it Whatever the value of this excision from the bill may be, the public owe it to Messrs. Hopkinson and Webster. Although I agree with those gentlemen that it was a power beyond the law, yet I doubt whether any power that can be exercised in the ordinary course of law will be strong enough to protect the public treasury from the chicanery of unprincipled men, fortified and encouraged in their dishonesty by the lenity of our laws and the lenity of public sentiment on the subject of pecuniary rights. Lenity abused necessarily produces severity; and in the laxity of the laws of debtor and creditor in the United States, and the gross abuses arising out of them. I think I see the germ of a future system of severe rigour A regulation on the part of the Executive to grant, no office of important pecuniary trust, without security of that kind, which, cannot be evaded without ruin to the surety may, and that alone can be effectual The bond of a banking house for instance, which could not slip out of its obligation by a legal quirk, by absconding, or by the letting comforts of an act of insolvency without shutting up its doors and its books for ever.

A bill from the Senate for disposing of a tract of land to emigrants to enable them to introduce into the United States, on an ample scale, the cultivation of the vine, was yesterday reported from a committee of the whole, and ordered for a third reading this day. To the surprise of many and of none more than myself, this bill was opposed. We hope the subject may succeed to the utmost hopes of those honest emigrants. Judging from the effects produced by the grape in all countries, I should consider it as productive of the best effects, in converting our drunken population into a sober one. In a race between wine and whiskey, the former would have no chance at this time—but a few years would probably turn the tables.

The Bonus bill, as it is generally called, passed to a third reading in the Senate yesterday, by a vote of 22 to 16, after an amendment in its detail, more explicitly requiring the assent of each state to the expenditures within its limits proposed to be made out of this fund—A statement of the proceedings to-reon, with the Yeas and Nays on the several questions on the bill, shall be given in our next.

In the Senate, the resolution introduced some days ago by Mr. Mason, of N. H. to reduce the army, was, after an animated debate indefinitely postponed, by a majority of more than two to one.—Nat. Int.

Proposals for Publishing

A UNIVERSAL GAZETTEER,

AND

Dictionary of Geography,

Ancient and Modern;

Containing a more complete enumeration than has hitherto been published, of the kingdoms, countries, provinces, cities, towns, forts, islands mountains, capes, seas, bays, lakes, rivers, Indian tribes, etc in the known world. With a copious account of all the important articles. By J. E. Worcester, A. M.

PROSPECTUS.

THE work, for which the patronage of the public is now solicited, should it be executed with sufficient accuracy, will, it is believed, be one of much convenience and utility. The want of a more complete Dictionary of Geography, than has yet been published in America, has been extensively felt by gentlemen of learning and intelligence. Crutwell's Gazetteer, the most complete work of the kind ever published in English, is too voluminous and expensive to come into general use; and with respect to this country, it is too incomplete and inaccurate to satisfy an American The Gazetteers which have been published in America, how well soever they may be adapted to answer the design for which they were intended yet, considered as Universal Dictionaries of Geography, are exceedingly imperfect. They are compiled upon the principle of noticing those articles that are of considerable importance, to the exclusion of a vast majority of such as are thought of less consequence. But the articles for which one has very frequent occasion to consult a Gazetteer, are those but of little notoriety; a work, therefore, formed upon such principles, will, at one time or other, be found altogether defective. It is indeed impossible to determine those articles in geography which will be most interesting, without knowing the future history of the world Places, not important in themselves, are often rendered highly so, by events connected with them. Every intelligent man, upon reading the history of any memorable transaction, feels desirous of knowing the situation of the place where it happened. But in the Gazetteers, in general use, the towns of Albuhera, Austerlitz, Berodino, Hohinlinden, Wagram, Waterloo, and various others, rendered famous during the late wars in Europe, are not to be found.

The Gazetteer now proposed will, so far as it respects the modern geography of the eastern continent, be founded upon the basis of that of Cruttwell, with additions and corrections. On the subject of ancient geography, the work of the celebrated D'Anville will be made the principal basis. With respect to America, materials have been collected from a great variety of sources. And the work will be found far more complete, with regard to this continent, than any that has yet been published. It will comprise in two large volumes, and in one alphabetical series, more than four times as many articles of Geography, as are contained in the Gazetteers which have been published in America.

The compiler originally formed the design of publishing in one volume a Dictionary of Geography, under every article of which, those particulars only, for which a Gazetteer is usually consulted, would be specified. With this view he proceeded to make his preparations. But upon calculation, he found that it would be impossible to reduce his materials to the compass of a single volume, without swelling it to an inconvenient size. He has therefore been induced to alter his design, and to adopt the plan of giving a more extended account of all the important matters, and of publishing the work in two volumes; and he hopes, that by omitting history, and every thing not important to be retained in such a work, and condensing what is valuable into the narrowest compass, by the use of abbreviations, which will be made perfectly intelligible by a key, he shall be able to furnish in the space of two volumes, a more complete book of reference on the subject of Geography, than has yet in the form of a Gazetteer been presented to the public. It will readily be seen that the design must require much labor and expense. The compiler respectfully submits it to the public under the impression that such a work is much needed, and that, if well executed, it will be highly useful to gentlemen of every profession and employment; and with the hope that he shall receive such encouragement as to enable him to render it not altogether unworthy of patronage.

CONDITIONS.

The work shall be handsomely printed in two volumes, on fine paper with a new and beautiful type.

Each volume will contain from 800 to 900 pages, large octavo, & be delivered to the subscribers in boards at four dollars and fifty cents a volume, or neatly bound and lettered at five dollars a volume.

RECOMMENDATION.

From the Reverend Dr. Dwight.

Yale College, Sept. 2, 1816.

Mr. Joseph Emerson Worcestor, has presented to me for my inspection, proposals for publishing a new work, entitled, a Universal Gazetteer and Dictionary of Geography; to which is annexed a specimen of the manner, intended to be pursued in the execution of the design. The work proposed will in my opinion, be a valuable addition to the existing means of acquiring geographical information. No publication within my knowledge includes so wide a circuit of Geograpical facts in the same compass, and most libraries will I suspect, be searched in vain for the materials which it is here intended to supply. Every man who reads a history, ancient or modern, a book of travels a voyage, or even a newspaper feels the importance of knowing the several places in which the writer stations him, and often finds it impossible to derive the necessary information from any sources within his reach

This disadvantage, experienced every where, Mr Worcester proposes to remove and has adopted what seems to be the happiest plan for this purpose.

I am pleased with the specimen given of the execution; and from my knowledge of the character of Mr. Worcester feel myself warranted to assure the public that full confidence may be safely placed in his skill. fidility, and accuracy.

JAMES KENNEDY & SON,

BOOKSELLERS, KING STREET,

Have just received from LEE'S PATENT MEDICINE Store, No. 46 Maiden Lane, N. York.

A FRESH SUPPLY

Of the following genuine Medicines.

For the prevention and cure of Bilious and Malignant Fevers, is recommended

Hahn's Anti-Bilious Pills.

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings, in several parts of the West Indies, and the Southern & Middle States, particularly in N. York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Petersburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Edenton, Wilmington, Charleston, and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons at each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe, that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives, when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy, founded on mere assertion.

It is not, indeed, presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience, for believing that a dose of these Pills, taken once in every two weeks, during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative: and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases, their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate, and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile & prevent its morbid secretions—to restore & amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which is so often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance—they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

HAMILTON'S WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions orfoulness in their stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of, as operating with violence; on the contrary, a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and perfectly innocent, and is also mild in its operation contains nothing but what is constitution. annot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old, should no worms exist in the body; but will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels, of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms, and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion

DESCRIPTION OF WORMS.

And the symptoms by which they are known:

Worms which infest the human body, are chiefly of four kinds, viz.—The Teres, or large round worm; the Ascarides, or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina, or short, flat, white worm; and lastly, the Tænia, or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, and sometimes voracious; purging, with slimy & feetid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face heated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success, in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent 'the vomiting and purging of chint'—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys the hand the infan part of our citizens it likewise th mildest and m ce

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.

A safe and effectual remedy for acute and chronic rheumatism, gout asthmatic gout, palsy, lumbagoo, numbness, white swellings, chilblains, sprains, bruises, pain in the face and neck, etc.

The Genuine Persian Lotion.

So celebrated among the fashionable throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellant minerals (the basis of other lotions) and of unparralled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin, freckles, pimples, inflamatory redness, scurfs, tetters, ringworms, sunburns, prickly heat, &c. The Persian Lotion operates mildly, without impeding the natural, insensible perspiration, which is essential to health, yet its effects are speedy and permanent, rendering the skin delicately soft and smooth and improving the complexion.

The Restorative Powder for the teeth and Gums.

This excellent preparation comforts and strengthens the gums, preserves the enamel from decay, and cleanses and whitens the teeth, by absorbing all the acrimonious slime and foulness, which suffered to accumulate, never fails to injure and finally ruin them.

Hamilton's Grand Restorative,

Is recommended a an invaluable medicine for the speedy relief and permanent cure of the various complaints resulting from dissipated pleasures, juvenile indiscretions, residence in climates unfavourable to the constitution, the immoderate use of tea, frequent inoxication or any other destructive intemperance the unskilful or excessive use of mercury, the diseases peculiar to females at certain period of life, bad lyings in, &c

PAUL'S

respect to which the Proprietor of serves:—

"THE great sales of the Columbia Oil, since it has been brought before the public, prove its intrinsic value, and is a pleasing foreboding of what we have to expect from its more extensive circulation.

Many interesting certificates might be furnished, testifying to the great value of the Columbian Oil, but we have preferred giving but few, wishing to rest more on the merits of the medicine, than on the effects produced by certificates from a source however respectable.

The following are among the complaints in which the Columbian Oil has been found very efficacious, viz. rheumatism, consumption, gout, pains in any part of the body, but more particularly of the back and breast; asthma, phthisic, influenza, colds, coughs, whooping coughs, diseases of the eye and eye lids, tooth ache, ear ache, and deafness, cholic, cramps, external and internal bruises, sprains and flesh wounds, old sores, ulcers, felons, scalds, burns, mumps, dysentery or flux, croup, quinzy, diarhœ or lax, summer complaint of children, indigestion, loss of appetite, nervous debility, piles, mercurial diseases, especially in those cases where the system has been charged with mercury for some considerable time, and in those excruciating pains subsequent to its too great use and exposure. Herpes, or diseases of the skin, such as ring worms, tetters, scald head, &c. stiffness of joints and limbs, palsy ague and fever, cholera morbus, gravel, gleetes, obstructed urine, scurvy, and in almost all cases of a general or local nature.

We are aware that in recommending a medicine in so many diseases, the public especially those who have not used the oil, may be induced to question its virtues, but a disposition of this nature will soon be dissipated, when they are informed that a great proportion of the diseases are owing to the same general cause.—And in those cases where the diseases differ materially in their nature, the effects produced are nearly the same, although not on the same principle
